This week’s special feature on cash transfer payments includes summaries from case studies by Guillermo Galicia, Nilima Ramteke, Dorothee Delort and Harish Natarajan. This complement last week’s discussion on eligibility and registries. Special thanks to Michal Rutkowski and David Stewart for their precious guidance and support.

As we reach the double-digit, 10th update of this weekly review, 190 countries and territories have planned, introduced or adapted social protection measures in response to COVID-19. New entries since last week include Cambodia, Cyprus, the Democratic Republic of Congo, Latvia, Lesotho, Liechtenstein, Monaco, Mozambique and Suriname. Social protection measures grew by 7%, or from 870 to 937 (figure 1).

Social assistance transfers are the most widely used class of interventions. These non-contributory programs account for 59.6% of global responses, or 559 measures (table 1 and figure 2). Among safety nets, cash transfer programs account for half of intervention by governments (figure 3), with their 283 COVID-related measures representing one-third (30.2%) of total social protection programs.

Both cash-based and in-kind transfers have been growing steadily, with cash accounting for a much larger number of measures. Cash-based measures are over twice those of in-kind programs (figure 3). About 57% of cash transfer measures (161 out of 283) are new programs in 104 countries, while one-fourth of measures (25.4%) are one-off payments. A significant number of new in-kind programs (91) has been also introduced, accounting for 70% of total in-kind measures.

Cash transfers include programs of various duration. The duration of programs ranges from 1 to 6 months, for an average of 2.9 months (figure 4). In some cases, programs are tied to the duration of the crisis. This is the case, for example, in Morocco and Tuvalu.

The size of cash transfers is relatively generous. Current transfers account for an average 25% of monthly GDP per capita in respective countries. The highest increase, or 47%, is registered in low income countries (among regions, ECA had the highest rate of 27%). On average, transfers have more than doubled (+139%) compared to average pre-COVID transfer levels (where data is available for a subset of 17 countries) (figure 5). Mongolia’s Child Money Program is increasing benefits from about MVT 10,000 in pre-Covid time to MNT 100,000.

Social assistance has been adapted to COVID-19 response in three ways. This includes expanding coverage, increasing benefits, and making administrative requirements simpler and more user-friendly. Specifically, administrative adaptations are occurring in 42 countries (figure 6). For example, anticipation of payments that due at later date (e.g., Malaysia); flexibility in the time of collection (e.g., Algeria); home delivery of cash for seniors (e.g., Armenia); postponement of recertification (e.g., Georgia); waiving of conditionalities (e.g., Philippines); and sharing of delivery systems across programs (e.g., Jordan). Increases in benefits among preexisting programs are implemented in 46 countries, including transfer value being increased (e.g., Egypt) and additional payment cycles (e.g., Chile). Coverage extension is underway in 159 countries: this includes expanding coverage of existing programs (22 cases) and 391 new social assistance programs (6 of which universal). Combined, those adaptations across administration, generosity and coverage in social assistance benefit over 1.7 billion individuals (i.e., 1,766,201,920). The same estimate applied only applied to cash transfers lead to an estimated 1.1 billion people benefiting from such adaptations (1,150,156,185). If we only consider coverage (horizontal expansion) of new and existing cash transfer schemes, these cover an estimated 914 million people (914,783,460).

Regions are scaling up cash transfers at different levels and pace. Asia is region with the highest absolute number of beneficiaries of cash transfers coverage, including EAP (first) and SAR (second). The lowest number is registered in Sub-Saharan Africa. In terms of share of the population covered, North America is the highest (22% of the population), while only 2% of Sub-Saharan Africa’s is covered by planned or actual cash transfers reported for Covid-19 (table 3 and figure 7).

In terms of social insurance, there has been a remarkable uptick in measures recently – now including 254 measures in 124 countries. Among the most popular interventions, unemployment benefits include 77 measures, now higher (for the first time since we track measures) than social security contributions having been waived or subsidized (61 programs). These are followed by 55 paid sick leave measures in 47 countries. Table 4 and the adjacent figure lay out main interventions.

The number of labor market interventions includes 126 measures in 79 countries. Wage subsidies continue to dominate those interventions (table 5 and accompanying pie chart), although they lost a few percentage points since last week. Activation measures and labor market regulation adjustments are present in 16 and 21 countries, respectively. Shorter-time work arrangements are adopted in 9 countries.

Trends and composition in regional measures vary. ECA has the highest upward trend, with LAC accelerating in recent weeks. Sub-Saharan Africa has been on a steady raise, with North America relatively flat (figure 8). Social assistance accounts for 84% of Africa’s Covid-related response (and 73% in SAR), while the largest share of social insurance appears in North America (50%) and MENA (37%). At almost 20%, East Asia and ECA show the highest share of labor market programs globally (figure 9). The region with the highest share of cash transfers out of its social assistance portfolio is North America (67%), while the same region, in tandem with SAR, has also the largest share of in-kind transfers (33%) (figure 10).

Spending in social protection is over half-trillion globally. Countries are spending an average of $45 per capita in social protection COVID-19 response. Our estimates indicate a level slightly higher than half-trillion (541 billion) in US dollars. Importantly, not all countries report on cost figures, and some are planned volumes. The bulk of spending includes universal or quasi-universal cash transfer programs in countries like Japan and the United States. Social assistance spending equals $541.7 billion, $484 of which in HICs. For the moment, LIC are investing $247 million in social assistance, while MICs about $56 billion ($23 billion of which in India). Defined in these terms, the overall global volume of social protection response to COVID-19 is 0.6% of global GDP (nearly $85 trillion). In terms of per capita spending, this ranges from $1 in LICs to $99 in HICs, and from $5 in Africa and MENA to $297 in North America.

In terms of “how” countries are implementing social protection programs in response to Covid-19, this edition offers a special feature on emerging delivery practices in relation to cash transfer payments<sup>1</sup>.

Authorities around the world are promoting the usage of digital payments to conform with social distancing measures. In order to prevent crowding around cash-out points (e.g. ATMs, bank’s branches, non-bank agents) which could increase health risks for the population, authorities are working with stakeholders to provide incentives for the immediate adoption and usage of digital payments. Policy responses for a wider adoption of digital payments include enabling easier opening of accounts for individuals, onboarding of agents and merchants, increases in transaction limits<sup>2</sup> and fee waivers<sup>3</sup> for digital payments transactions.

Several countries have leveraged/ deployed digital payments to deliver emergency Government-to-Person (G2P) programs. The nature and scope of deployment of digital payments for G2P emergency programs depends on the level of development of the digital payment ecosystem and financial inclusion in the country. Countries with robust digital payments ecosystem and high levels of financial inclusion among recipients were able to quickly deploy digital cash transfers. For example, in India, 200 million account holders of the Pradhan Mantri Jan Dhan Yojana program, a financial inclusion program, were able to receive account-based cash transfers as an immediate response to the Covid-19 pandemic. Thailand used the PromptPay system to deliver digital cash transfers. In contrast, in other countries, with low levels of financial inclusion and development of the digital payments ecosystem, authorities have found themselves bound to either hand out cash directly to beneficiaries (Philippines) or exclusively use cash-out points to deliver social assistance payments (Ecuador). Countries with relatively well-developed payments ecosystem, such as Colombia, deployed digital cash transfers in different phases as authorities and stakeholders reinforced their social registries and payments mechanisms<sup>4</sup>. In some cases, authorities have deployed non account-based options that leverage digital payment channels. For example, the emergency program for informal workers in Peru uses One-Time-Passwords, that are obtained through a cellphone application that can be used without opening an account, to withdraw money from branches, ATMs and non-bank agents.

Jurisdictions delivering cash-only G2P payments are experiencing crowding around cash-out points. In order to avoid this several jurisdictions are moving to account based cash transfers. In the case of Ecuador, beneficiaries of the Bono de Protección Familiar, the emergency G2P program designed by the government, are crowding in at cash-out points even with recent efforts of the government and stakeholders to increase the number of access points and space out payments. Across jurisdictions it is common for some cash-out points to become unavailable due to a variety of reasons: sanitary restrictions, limited operating hours of branches, lack of protective material for employees and customers, lack of liquidity, and staff unavailability due to health concerns. This leads to further crowding at available cash-out points. In response, several jurisdictions are moving to Account-based solutions, where the cash transfer amount is credited into an account in the name of the recipient and maintained with a licensed payment service provider (PSP). The recipient is then able to access the cash transfer at agents, branches and ATMs of the PSP and the digital payment networks in which the PSP participates. Furthermore, the recipient can also directly make digital payments from the account and receive other payments like remittances into the same account.

<sup>2</sup> In Albania, Brunei, Egypt, Ghana, Indonesia, Kenya, Nepal, Philippines, Palestine, Pakistan, Portugal, Rwanda and Uganda authorities have withdrawn fees for using electronic payment services, such as electronic transfers and mobile money services. In Cameroon, Ethiopia, Nigeria, Uganda and Zambia private providers are waiving fees to users of mobile payments.

<sup>4</sup> Payment mechanism refers to the combination of characteristics that collectively describe how a person accesses their account, how a payment is made, where and how cash can be accessed from an account. A debit card or prepaid card for example allows accessing the underlying account at ATMs, agents and at merchants using a physical card, in contrast a mobile money service enables accessing an account using mobile phone using an app or SMS/USSD messages and can be used at agents to deposit and withdraw cash and at merchants for making payments and can be used to make transfers.

Most account based digital cash transfers use the following three-pronged approach (figure 11). Including the following:

- Social protection agencies collect information and create list of beneficiaries using two mechanisms: (i) Add households from existing social registries and (ii) Accept applications on-line and/or with mobile applications (see last week’s review, version May 15).
- Authorities use the targeting and enrollment process to either collect information on existing accounts or their preferred choice. In some cases authorities have used analytics to identify if beneficiaries already have an account: In the latter case, financial and social protection authorities work along with relevant stakeholders to identify if beneficiaries possess an account used to receive other cash transfers or an account used for personal purposes. If an account is used to receive any existing cash transfer, then the same account can be used.
- Authorities instruct beneficiaries without an existing account to open an account with a PSP: Authorities communicate with beneficiaries through remote channels (e.g. SMS) and either instruct beneficiaries to open an account on a specific PSP or allow the beneficiary to choose the PSP, depending on the country circumstances.

Source: World Bank 2020 (forthcoming) Key considerations and policy options for emergency cash-transfer payment solutions.

Ideally, recipients should be able to receive their cash transfers in a PSP of their choice and the social protection agency should not have to decide or select the PSP. However, in most countries, authorities have had to assign a set of PSPs due to various reasons (e.g., lack of PSP coverage in certain areas of the country) to ensure a minimum level of service quality and exert control over the entire delivery process. In the current context and particularly for vulnerable segments of the population, such as those in remote and rural areas, there might be no real choice for the recipients. Additionally, in some instances, authorities are guided by considerations of avoiding excessive reliance on a specific PSP. Because of this, authorities chose to empanel a set of PSPs that can be used as a default option. In general, authorities' criteria to choose empaneled PSP includes the size and reach of their network, interoperability<sup>5</sup> of their payments solution and ability to quickly deploy the program. In some cases, authorities have chosen state-owned banks, for example, in Brazil, the digital cash transfers are carried out through the state-owned bank Caixa. In other jurisdictions, interoperability was a key criterion, which is the case of Jordan, where e-money providers are interoperable through the JoMoPay platform.

In some countries, authorities have sought to offer a variety of options based on specific segments of recipients. Most countries chose a single PSP who in turn offers a specific payment mechanism to deploy a specific G2P emergency program. However, some countries have tailored different payments mechanisms to fit needs of different segments of beneficiaries within the same program. In Colombia, for the Ingreso Solidario program, authorities have implemented different types of delivery mechanisms based on specific characteristics of the telecommunications and financial infrastructure available to beneficiaries. For example, beneficiaries with smartphones will be requested to open accounts with PSP that offer payments platforms that can only run on these devices. Beneficiaries with feature phones will be directed to open accounts on providers that offer SMS based platforms<sup>6</sup> and recipients located in remote communities will receive the payment in branches of the state-owned bank with presence in such communities.

Social registries, databases and on-line and mobile platforms have become essential to deliver digital G2P emergency payments. Many countries that deployed digital cash transfers have leveraged the information contained in the social registries or collected through on-line and mobile platforms. Usage of the information ranges from prefilling digital forms for account opening (Brazil) to providing beneficiaries' contact information to authorities, so they can request them to open accounts (Jordan). In this case a successful implementation of digital cash transfers is also a direct function of the quality and completeness of the social registries, databases and on-line and mobile platforms.

Data disclosure and protection measures are put in place for identifying existing accounts of beneficiaries'. Authorities are using information available with them to identify recipients who already have existing accounts with PSPs. In such case, regulatory reforms have been enacted to allow the exchange of information and assure the confidentiality and protection of the information. Authorities in Colombia, and recently Peru, established emergency decrees that allow them to access and share with relevant stakeholders critical information such as existing account information. The regulatory provisions require that all parties that participate in the information exchange implement measures to protect the confidentiality of the information, as well as restrict its circulation.

For beneficiaries without an existing account, authorities are leveraging adoption of basic accounts as well as simplified and remote account opening processes. Basic accounts are accounts with restricted functionalities and come with caps on the balance amount and transaction limits. These could be held with banks or non-bank providers (referred to as e-money or mobile money). Because of these limitations account opening requirements can be relaxed, which allow for remote and simplified

<sup>5</sup> The ability of customers of one PSP to transact with customers of another PSP and at agents, merchants and ATMs of another PSP. Interoperability requires a central infrastructure to which all participating PSPs are connected. The operator of this infrastructure could be the central bank, a consortium of PSPs or a public-private partnership.

<sup>6</sup> This type of platforms allows the user to initiate payments or other transactions through the exchange of structured messages using SMS (Short Message Service) / text messages with their PSP. In some cases, a specific service called USSD offered by telecom companies is used, this allows a menu-based interaction between the PSP and its customer.

customer due diligence. For deployment of digital cash transfers, authorities set up or used existing legal and operational framework that allows for using either exclusively or a combination of basic accounts, and remote and simplified customer diligence. Authorities have implemented a set of policy responses to facilitate and increase adoption of this type of digital cash transfers (table 1).

Table 7. Examples of policy responses for digital cash transfers

	Remote onboarding	Simplified Customer Due Diligence	Use of simplified platforms (SMS based)	Fee waivers /reductions	Increased transaction limits	Interoperability	Use of basic accounts
Brazil	X	X		X			X
Colombia	X	X	X	X			X
Jordan	X	X		X	X	X	X
Morocco	X	X		X	X	X	X
Bangladesh	X	X	X	X	X		X
Pakistan		X	X	X

Simplified payments platforms are being used to open accounts and make payments. As many beneficiaries’ lack smartphones to run sophisticated payments apps, in some countries, authorities have empaneled PSP that can provide payment platforms that can run on feature phones. In Colombia and Togo, beneficiaries can set up accounts and carry out payments over platforms that run on feature phones. In Peru, non-account digital payments can be accessed through a simplified version of the mobile banking platform, which works through a simple exchange of SMS. In Bangladesh, the existing mobile money services are already available on feature phones.

Communication and financial education relevant to the digital payment mechanism are considered essential in jurisdictions delivering cash transfers. Authorities are leveraging remote channels such as digital media and social networks to communicate the processes and steps required to receive cash-based or digital payments. PSPs are creating special resources and communication channels to help setting up and using digital payments. In Jordan, besides the PSPs and the payments infrastructure operator - JoPACC, the central bank is also aiding beneficiaries for setting up and using e-wallets. Further, a demo e-wallet can be accessed by beneficiaries to try the functionalities and build trust.

Incentives to increase usage of digital transactions are being included as part of the framework for digital cash transfers and authorities are taking steps to expand acceptance of digital payments. Besides increased transaction limits and fee waivers, other incentives like free mobile connectivity and data charges are being offered. Limited acceptance of digital payments by shops and other establishments where the recipients typically visit, will lead to recipients cashing-out their benefit transfers in full. Acceptance of digital payments remains a challenge in many countries, particularly in remote and rural zones where the cost and technological requirements to deploy payments infrastructure remain high. Approaches like Quick Response code based payments<sup>7</sup> (QR) and mobile phone-based solutions could be relevant in this regard, but they require that a set of preconditions. Some authorities have created initiatives for developing low-cost and simpler acceptance technologies. In India, the National Payments Corporation of India developed a fully on-line and remote process for vendors and merchants onboarding for usage of QR payments. The Central Bank of Jordan recently launched a challenge fund that aims to create incentives for providers of e-wallets to acquire merchants that accept digital payments.

In addition to the efforts to expand acceptance of digital payments, authorities are also expanding cash-out options. As acceptance of digital payments remains limited and the provision of some essential services can only be paid with cash, authorities are also paying attention to the cash-out options. To alleviate liquidity pressures authorities and avoid concentration of payouts at single locations authorities provide guidance and direct beneficiaries to specific locations to cash-out. Also, authorities have simplified requirements to open new cash-out locations and coordinated with the PSPs to increase the number of cash-out points. In the case of Jordan, beneficiaries can access card-less cash withdrawals from ATMs, and in Ecuador, cash-out points were increased from 3,500 to 10,500 in order to provide a wider number of cash-out options.

The first wave of cash transfers highlights the importance of digitizing these payments and developing the digital payments ecosystem. Countries with well developed digital payment ecosystems were able to rapidly scale the G2P programs and offer convenient options for the recipients. Furthermore, it is expected that some authorities may seize this opportunity to put in place the building blocks or accelerate initiatives that were already underway. However, it is important to recall that there are important challenges (e.g. interoperability, acceptance) that are not exclusively related to G2P programs and that need to be addressed to realize digital payments' benefits. Additionally, authorities must act upon other risks that come from the operation of digital payments, such as ensuring that customer protection measures are in place and that limits, overdrafts and other account-related matters do not impact the ability of the recipient to access the full amount of the cash transfer in line with their needs and context. Digital cash transfers programs that do not address these issues may increase beneficiaries' costs and exposure to health risks. Also, authorities need to monitor other type of unintended effects, including the effect of policy responses for cash transfers on competition in the payments market.

The following case studies will dig deeper into countries' experiences with payments arrangements in practice.

Brazil (based on note produced by Rodrigo Ortiz D'Avila Assumpcao as part of the G2Px initiative)<sup>8</sup> Emergency Aid is a new Cash Transfer Program, approved by congress on April 2, aiming to provide emergency financial protection during the Covid 19 pandemic crisis. The program is operated through Caixa Econômica Federal and will be paid to 54 million beneficiaries and reach above 84 million people. Citizens apply for the cash transfer through mobile and on-line platforms and receive a code that can later be used to open a Digital Social Savings Account.

Once the beneficiaries have been selected the payment is disbursed through existing channels for beneficiaries of Bolsa Família (the largest G2P program in Brazil) including cards and accounts opened in Caixa, by direct deposit to new beneficiaries with an existing account in the Bank of Brasil or Caixa, an account registered by beneficiaries during the program enrollment period or through the recently implemented Digital Social Savings Account. Authorities reached an agreement with banks to avoid charging existing debts or overdrafts over the cash transfer.

The Digital Social Savings Account is an all-digital account offered by Caixa and beneficiaries can operate it through an app developed by the bank. The account is free and includes free transactions: Two ATM withdrawals per month, three monthly transfers to other banks, unlimited transfers within Caixa and two monthly statements. There are no data charges for downloading and operating the app for 90 days.

To open the account, beneficiaries input in the Caixa app their CPF<sup>9</sup> and the code they received after they finalized the application, no other information must be provided by beneficiaries as authorities use information collected through the program application process to conduct the customer due diligence process. As of April 2020, Caixa stated that it has opened more than 10 million Digital Social Savings Accounts.

Colombia (based on note produced by Luz Stella Rodriguez, Peter McConaghy and Guillermo Galicia Rabadan as part of the G2Px initiative)<sup>10</sup>

An innovative new program to respond to COVID-19 and targeting informal workers, Ingreso Solidario, utilizes recent regulatory modernization supportive of digital financial services to offer the transfer through bank accounts and mobile wallets. As of May 12, 2020, Colombian authorities have been able to reach 1.6 million families through more than 20 financial institutions with the Ingreso Solidario program.

A key innovation surrounding Ingreso Solidario is its use of the financial sector to promote digital deployment (via bank accounts and mobile wallets). It also incorporates tiered and remote customer onboarding, data sharing protocols, and leverages recent regulatory modernization towards non-bank payment service provision.<sup>11</sup> The type of account that is used for the program is a simplified account with balance and transaction limits. Data that must be provided for opening simplified accounts include type of ID, ID number, place and date of issue, full name of accountholder, and place and date of birth. A regulatory modification (Decree 518 of 2020) allowed for the exchange of information between Mobile Network Operators (MNOs), banks, and the Government (safeguarded and for the implementation of the program). These characteristics support the program's dual mandate of addressing immediate consumption needs and financial inclusion. The government saw a unique opportunity for leveraging bank and fintech delivery for low-value emergency payments, including the promotion of account-based deposits. The program design intends to minimize agglomeration and risks to public health, and both improving government efficiency and customer experience.

Phase one of the program has already been implemented and reached close to 1.6 million families. The government made account-based payments for those beneficiaries who already owned a bank account through more than 20 financial institutions.

Under phase two of the program, which is currently under development, the government is working in collaboration with banks to identify beneficiaries without a bank account. Beneficiaries are contacted by the banks through a SMS and requested to remotely open accounts with simplified customer due diligence through mobile wallets and mobile banking solutions offered by banks and SEDPEs. Mobile solutions are available for smartphones and feature phones, and operation of wallets and mobile banking can be carried out without data plans. The payment will be deposited in the simplified accounts and beneficiaries will be able to use the functionalities of the mobile applications including person to person transfers, payment of services, such as public services, and cash-outs by obtaining OTPs through the apps. Phase two of the program is expected to reach close to 1,900,000 households who previously did not have access to the formal financial systems (see Figure 1). Beneficiaries located in remote areas will be reached through Banco Agrario branches. Authorities are in the process of designing an identification and payment mechanism for beneficiaries without a cellphone.

Ecuador (based on note produced by Veronica Trujillo, Luz Stella Rodriguez and Douglas Randall as part of the G2Px initiative)<sup>12</sup>

Due to the Covid-19 emergency, in late March 2020, the government created by Executive Decree 1022 the Bono de Protección Familiar as a response to the COVID-19 crises. This emergency transfer is targeted at vulnerable households, not included in previous programs, whose income is below US$ 503 a month. The Executive Decree explicitly refers to non-wage earners workers or self-employed, registered in the social security system. The total amount to be transferred is US$ 120, in two separate disbursements. The government initially identified 400,000 new beneficiaries and has recently announced that it will be expanded to 550,000 new households.

The payment arrangement for the emergency program relies on OTC or cash disbursements. Once MIES identifies the beneficiaries, they transfer their data (name, ID number, and amount to be paid) to a transactional platform, created specifically to facilitate these transfers, called switch concentrador. Seven institutions, known as concentradores, are connected to this platform and each of them has a network of financial institutions (211 in total) delivering the emergency payment. Financial institutions participating in the mechanism include public and private banks and cooperatives. Banecuador – state-owned bank – plays a key role due to its wide geographic coverage.

The payment process starts with a desirous beneficiary calling MIES office or accessing the MIES website, to verify their eligibility. To ease the process, beneficiaries are assigned a place and day of payment according to their address and the last digit of their ID. This information is provided via text message or via the dedicated phone line. The last digit of the beneficiary ID defines a range of days when they can claim the payment. For example, if their ID finishes in 1, they could claim the transfer on the 1st, 11th, or 21st day of the month.

Beneficiaries visit a specific cash-out point and provide national ID, information from ID is captured and then validated against the switch concentrador. If information is valid, the beneficiary receives the cash payment.

MIES has increased substantially the number of points of access available by relaxing rules for the participation of agents, such as the minimum time providing services, reduced to 6 months, or daily liquidity requirements for money agents (decreased to US$ 600). Disbursements were usually delivered through approximately 3,500 points of access, including branches and agent correspondents. This number has increased to more than 10,500 outlets now.

Jordan (based on note produced by Harish Natarajan, Guillermo Galicia and Ragheb Budeiri as part of the G2Px initiative)<sup>13</sup>

Jordan declared State of Emergency on March 17th, 2020 through the activation of the defense law, which immediately had an economic effect on vulnerable groups, particularly on daily wage workers. As a response to Covid-19, the government issued the Defense Order no. 9, which provides cash transfers to informal workers whose jobs have been curbed by the Covid-19 crisis. The initiative will reach approximately 200,000 households and deliver an estimated 136 JOD (192 USD) per month for households with three or more members, and JOD 70 (USD 48) for households with two members or less.

The payment arrangement is based on the delivery of cash transfers through e-money accounts also referred to e-wallets, which can be opened with any of the seven licensed PSPs. To facilitate this process the Central Bank of Jordan relaxed its current regulations for PSPs by allowing remote e-wallet opening, which can be carried out through simplified Know-Your-Customer requirements. The Central Bank also instructed PSPs to achieve full interoperability through the central JoMoPay switch.

Once the National Aid Foundation (NAF), the social protection agency in charge of the program, has identified beneficiaries, they compile a list and provide it to the Jordan Payments & Clearing Company (JoPACC) which operates the JoMoPay switch, to verify if any of the beneficiaries have an active e-wallet in the JoMoPay system. Once beneficiaries with e-wallets have been identified, they are contacted through SMS to confirm if they want to use the existing e-wallet to receive the cash transfer.

Beneficiaries without e-wallets are also contacted through an interactive SMS and are requested to choose one PSP to open an e-wallet. Upon selection, NAF sends each PSP a list for their respective beneficiaries and PSPs must assist beneficiaries in the process to open an e-wallet. Before disbursing cash transfers to beneficiaries, authorities confirm the information with JoPACC to avoid any errors in recording beneficiary account information.

Beneficiaries can use e-wallets to transfer money and to cash-out from any nearby agents as well as few bank's ATMs that offer mobile wallet cash-out service. Authorities have made efforts to increase the CICO network and increased access points. The wallet to agent ratio went from 450:1 to 229:1. Authorities have set additional incentives to increase adoption of digital payments, such incentives include increasing the transaction limits for e-wallets up to 5,000 JOD and reduce interchange fees. Also, the Central Bank of Jordan launched a challenge fund for PSPs, which intends to increase adoption of digital payments at merchants.

The PSPs in collaboration with NAF, JoPACC, the Central Bank of Jordan and different international social protection agencies, such as the WFP and UNICEF, provide training sessions, material and communication channels for beneficiaries. Through these channels, beneficiaries can receive information and guidance on how to open and use e-wallets.

administrative control of the Poverty Alleviation and Social Safety Division of the Federal Government. Its programs form an integral part of Government's overall social protection program titled "Ehsaas" (empathy). BISP makes regular transfers of PKR 2,000 per month to about 4.5 million families.

Government of Pakistan launched the Ehsaas Emergency Cash Program in early April 2020 to address the economic burden placed on the poor and vulnerable, specially daily wage earners, due to the corona virus crisis. The Emergency Cash Program is designed for immediate deployment, using the existing digital payment system of BISP. The target is to disburse PKR 144 billion (about USD 0.9 billion) among 12 million families (PKR 12,000 per family).

BISP beneficiaries receive regular cash transfers from Points of Sale (POS) of biometrically enabled branchless banking operations and biometrically enabled ATMs. All new beneficiaries first enroll in the Program by providing their biometrics at nearby payment touch point. They also have the option to ask the concerned bank to open a savings account for them and transfer the cash to the account for later use. To avoid error and fraud, cash is disbursed only after biometric verification of each beneficiary through NADRA.

All existing and new beneficiaries receive emergency cash through the existing payment system. However, to increase number of touch points the existing payment mechanism has been enhanced by asking the provincial governments to provide open public spaces for setting up fully secure cash disbursement centers (in addition to existing POS and ATMs). Non-BISP beneficiaries of emergency cash program do not have the option of opening a savings account since they are only being provided a one-time transfer. COVID-specific safety measures (safe distancing, provision of hand-sanitizers, regular cleaning of biometric devices, wearing of masks etc.) have been adopted at all payment points. By April 30, 2020, Government had disbursed PKR 78 billion to 6.4 million beneficiaries across the country.

Peru (based on note produced by Fiorella Risso and Douglas Randall as part of the G2Px initiative)<sup>15</sup>

Peru declared a State of Emergency on March 16th, 2020, initiating a 14-day quarantine period and taking different measures to resolve the health response and in turn reduce the impact on the economy, especially in the vulnerable households. Through the Emergency Decree N 027-2020, the Peruvian Government approved an exceptional transfer of 380 PEN (110 USD) directed to 2.7 million poor and non-extreme poor households, which will be implemented through MIDIS (“Yo me quedo en casa” program). Additionally, on March 27th, 2020, through Emergency Decree No. 033-2020, the Ministry of Labor granted to 780,000 households with self-employed workers who have not benefited from the first subsidy, a transfer of the same amount (380 PEN – “Bono Independiente” program).

For the “Yo me quedo en casa” subsidy, the payment has been carried out by the four largest private banks and the state bank of the country. Over 500 000 beneficiaries with an existing account in Banco de la Nación (BN) receive the bono in their accounts. Cash-out was allowed from existing financial institution ATM network with no charges, and BN banking agents as well. In order to ensure liquidity for banking agents, the government has, through the BN, granted credit lines, which were offered to selected agents. The majority of beneficiaries without BN accounts received cash in hand in bank branches showing their ID card.

<sup>15</sup> With contributions from Guillermo Galicia, Hugo Brousset, and Veronica Trujillo. The G2P emergency cash transfer payment solution in Peru is evolving in real time. This note includes information as of April 23, 2020.

After reviewing eligibility on the online platform adapted by the social protection agency (MIDIS), beneficiaries receive specific information on the disbursement: day, time, bank branch, address. Bank branches have been selected through a geographic localization method which allows people go to the bank branch closest to their home. A staggered payment schedule was used to address the need of minimizing risk of contagion of Covid-19.

For the “Bono independiente” program, the Ministry of Labor, together with the National Registry (RENIEC) and BN, have implemented a new platform “Bono independiente” to review eligibility for the subsidy. Beneficiaries’ identity validation is then carried out through RENIEC (ID card number and name).

Currently, the only FSP for the disbursement strategy is BN. As for MIDIS payment, beneficiaries with an account in BN received the transfer directly into their accounts. For those who did not have an account, BN opens temporary, limited functionality, mobile accounts linked to the mobile number of the beneficiary. The beneficiary receives a link and code through SMS connecting them to the USSD mobile platform. By inserting the code in the system, the beneficiary can select cash withdrawal options and get their payments from the selected access point. The temporary account allows certain functionalities in relation to payments as well as the partial or total withdrawal of the subsidy. Beneficiaries can also made transfers between BN accounts as well as making payments for basic services. Legal restrictions prevent BN from opening fully functional basic accounts for beneficiaries.

About this review

This 10th “living paper” edition contributes to the global knowledge on how countries are responding to the pandemic by documenting real-time actions in a key area of response – that is, social protection measures planned or implemented by governments.

For the purpose of this review, we organized interventions by social assistance, social insurance and labor market programs. For the latter measures, we deliberately focused on supply-side programs (e.g., mostly wage subsidies and other activation programs). In most cases, data sources include official information published in government websites, while in many cases we reported information from global and national news outlets. In some cases, information was provided directly by country-based experts, while the full database was validated and integrated by regional and country social protection teams at the World Bank and UNICEF. Overall, findings should be considered preliminary, subject to change, and as such interpreted with caution. The information on country-level measures presented in this review is continuously verified, triangulated and enriched, with updated versions being released on a weekly basis (i.e., every Friday) until further notice. This would help provide a “situation room” with a view to inform decisionmakers, practitioners and the broad public about the most recent policy and operational developments in the sphere of social protection responses to COVID-19.

The reminder of the note zooms into a country-by-country examination of measures presented in tabular form. The structure by social assistance, insurance, and labor interventions is accompanied by more granular reporting of specific schemes and their summary description. Sources are provided as weblinks in footnotes. This is preceded by an “at a glance” overview of broad categories of programs present across social protection.

  - Support to pregnant women who are not employed until 30 March and whose husband lost the job after 13 March in the amount of a 100,000 AMD (US$201) lump sum payment.
  - Support to hired workers and individual entrepreneurs (formal employment) in Armenia's private sector most affected by the spread of coronavirus, specifically, in hotel and hostel, public catering, tourism, barber shops and beauty parlors, retail trade. . This was expanded to cover also hired workers and individual entrepreneurs from the following sectors: ground transport operations (route transport); preschool institutions (private kindergartens); sporting activities (sports clubs, swimming pools); entertainment and other leisure activities. The amounts would range between 68,000 and 136,000 AMD. (US$137-274).<sup>34</sup> (all new)
- On 13 and 14 April, the Government announced a new package of measures, which include:
    - Support package number 9 (social)
    - Beneficiary: Family with a child aged 0-18, where both parents do not have a registered job as of March 12, 2020, and no part-time or full-time work from March 12-March 31. This was expanded to cover parents, who were as of March 12, 2020, in child care leave for children under the age of 3
    - Support type: lump-sum assistance for each child in the amount of AMD 26,500 (about 55 USD).
    - Basic conditions: the children and at least one of the parents reside in the Republic of Armenia, the family is not eligible for a family benefit; at least one of the parents did not have a job with a

(all new) <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Support package No 13: One-time assistance at the rate of 50% of the amount of the social benefit or family benefit for those families enrolled in the family benefit system and eligible as of April 2020. There is no need to apply. 70% of the assistance will be available as a cash payment in addition to the amount of the family allowance for April; the balance of 30% will be transferred to the utility operator on behalf of the subscriber of electricity. If the beneficiary has a debt, the funds will be used to settle the arrears. In the absence of overdue bills, they will come as a prepayment for services. If the beneficiary is not an electricity subscriber, this part of the funds shall be offered to the beneficiary as a cash payment. For example, if a family receives an average family benefit of 31,350 AMD (app. 66 USD), then 21,945 AMD (46.2 USD) would go as top-up cash payment and 9,405 AMD (19.8 USD) for electricity (or if no electricity, then also as cash). (new)</li> <li>Support package No 14: three different options of assistance for students. 1) semester tuition fees for Bachelor's, Master's, and PhD students with a GPA of 90 or more and in graduate course of the existing system of state universities will be 100% paid by the Government. Semester tuition fees for non-graduate students with a GPA of 90 or more will be paid 75 percent. Graduate students who do not have a tuition fee debt may turn down the assistance, or receive the amount if it has been paid by an individual. And if the graduating student's fee is paid through a student loan, the money will be directed to pay the loan. 2) the procedure for providing student loans will be simplified. Interest rates on current and new loans for students with a GPA of more than 80 will be zeroed for 2020, including for the students at state-accredited universities; 3) Loan interest rates for students with a GPA less than 80 will be subsidized by 5%; that is, loans will be available at 4 percent. ## Wage subsidies

- Wage subsidy of 50% of the wage of apprentices and trainees from January to September 2020; the subsidy is up to AUD 21,000 per person and for a total cost of AUD 1.3 billion.
- Australia is providing a wage subsidy (so-called “JobKeeper payment”) for all permanent, part-time and casual workers who have worked for at least a year with their employer and were employed as of March 1, 2020. It is up to AUD 1,500 (USD 909) per two weeks for a period of six months, which is around 70 percent of the national median wage. Firms must show major reductions in turnover to qualify, which is 50 percent reduction in turnover for large firms and 30 percent for smaller firms. This is expected to cover around 6 million of the 13 million strong workforce.<sup>41</sup>

Wage subsidies

- BGN 1 billion was allocated for paying 60% of the wages of workers who risk being laid off because of the crisis in the course of three months, provided that their employees cover the remaining 40 per cent. According to latest data from MLSP, 7,403 employers have submitted applications for 101,849 employees (as of 29 April 2020).<sup>93</sup>
- Another BGN 200 million was conferred to BBD for providing portfolio guarantees to commercial banks so that they can provide unsecured interest-free loans in the amount of up to BGN 1,500 (US$827) to workers who are put on unpaid leave<sup>94 95</sup>.
- Finally, a supplementary pay in the amount of BGN 1,000 (US$552) was accorded to medical staff and other front-line responders to the pandemic

Nearly 2 million households are expected to receive the transfer which will be granted for a maximum of three months. The first payout corresponds to 100 percent of the full transfer amount, the second payout 85 percent and the third 65 percent. The transfer amount depends on household type (whether the households is exclusively informal, or whether the households is vulnerable and partially informal) and size of the household. As an example, a household with four members that are exclusively dependent on income from the informal sector will receive a first transfer corresponding to CLP $ 280,000 (USD $ 340). - The government is providing income support payments for those who have been temporarily placed on a shorter working week. The payment is made in respect of regular salary for the days that employees are no longer working. For example, if a working week has been reduced from a 5 to 3 days, the worker can receive support for the other 2 days. Short Time Work Support is paid for a maximum of 234 days. The entitlement will depend on the number of social insurance contributions employees have.
- The Temporary COVID-19 Wage Subsidy Scheme provides a subsidy up to 85% depending on employees' previous average net weekly pay.<sup>209</sup>

The rationale is the minimization of movement of beneficiaries to social services or to public employment services, where they are expected to sign a social inclusion pact or a labor pact. A separate note stressed the importance of ensuring continuity of social services during the emergency, with a focus on protecting social workers and beneficiaries from contagion, promoting the use of telephone and technology to maintain contact with families, and paying special attention to situation of vulnerability for women and minors. 	Food, vouchers, others	On 4 April, the National Commission for Social Action (NaCSA) in collaboration with the Ministry of Social Welfare, Anti-Corruption Commission, and the National Commission for Persons with Disabilities, distributed 25 kg bags of rice, 250,000 leones ($25.77), Veronica buckets, and others items to people with disabilities in district headquarter towns. This support reached 1,891 individual and group beneficiaries. Outreach to people with disabilities is now continuing, and the Government expects to reach approximately 10,000 PWD (500 per district and 2,500 in the Western Area), for a cost of 4 billion leones. <sup>332</sup>
