2, Economic, social and cultural characteristics of ethnic minorities in the project area

As of December 31, 2017, the average total population of the whole Bac Giang province was 1,774,421 persons, of which the Nung EM accounting for 6%, followed by the Tay EM accounting for 4%, the Kinh EM accounting for 86,1%, the San Diu accounting for 2% and the other EM accounting for 0,09%,

Ethnic minorities in Bac Giang province live in 10/11 district/cities of the province, The specific characteristics of each ethnic group are as follows:

a) Nung EM:

Nung was the first most popular ethnic people in Bac Giang province, In 2017, the population of Nung in Bac Giang was about 93,284 people, accounting for 6% of the total population of the province, Nung EM are distributed evenly in districts, cities through the province, especially in Son Dong district, Yen The district, Lang Giang district, Luc Nam district and Luc Ngan district, Bac Giang province,

The Nung settled into villages of different sizes, Village was built mainly on the hillside, The area is adjacent to the cultivated land and near the water source, Most of the Nung's houses are stilted houses with two pillars, two main roofs and two trapezoidal scales, with 3 to 5 partitions made of veneer and bamboo, but the better-off houses with planks have two bridges, stairs up and down, the floor is usually about 1,6 meters from the ground,

The main living source of Nung people is rice and corn, They combine wet rice cultivation in the areas along rivers and streams and dry rice cultivation on hillsides, The Nung also cultivates many industrial and perennial fruit trees such as tangerines, persimmons, anise ,, Anise is the most valuable tree of the people, bringing significant profits every year, The most well-developed handicraft industries are textile, carpentry and wickerwork,

Each village has a village head elected by the people in the village and is responsible for capturing relevant information, guidelines and policies of the Party and the State to propagate to the people in the village, the duties of the village head, similar to the previous Village patriarchs, In general, the Nung are still a community of solidarity and solidarity among members, support, solidarity, sharing in eating and drinking New Year, the care and mutual help, The linkage between families as well as the attachment of each member to the village is based on kinship or neighborhood relations.

In terms of communication language, most Tay people can hear and speak Mandarin (Vietnamese), so the implementation of the Ethnic Minority Development Plan is quite convenient.

Currently, most of the Nung ethnic people in some districts of the province have been granted certificates under the GCN measurement project under the overall project or projects for land use right certificates. The people's land parcels were basically issued in accordance with the intended use and the owner. However, in the process of issuing land use right certificate, there are many difficulties as usual, ethnic minorities give their children, security, purchase, sale and transfer without paper documents as prescribed. oral or written handwritten without confirmation ... on the other hand, the loss of issued land use right certificate are also common because people still do not see it important to have the land use right certificate. also the land traditions his father left behind for a long time no one can use. However, in many forms of implementation, up to now, Bac Giang province has basically implemented the issuance of land use certificates for people in the province in general and ethnic minorities in particular.

b) Tay EM

The Tay is the second most populous EM after the Nung EM in Bac Giang province with about 54,919 people, accounting for 4% of the provincial population,

The residence of the Tay ethnic group is distributed in almost 10/10 districts and cities of Bac Giang province, Like the Nung EM, the Tay people live in villages and the hamlets to settle down and settle in each village with about 15 to 20 households or even 80 households, mainly living in the valleys and mountain slopes, which are convenient for transportation, The Tay's house is popular for houses with 3 spaces, 2 roofs (no left), earthen walls or bamboo, surrounding wood, thatched roofs, The Tay people are agricultural residents with a tradition of wet rice cultivation, who have long known to practice intensive cultivation and widely apply irrigation measures such as acquiring and fading to get water to irrigate rice fields, In addition to the wet rice, the Tay also grow dry rice, vegetables, fruit trees, etc, Livestock has developed with a variety of cattle and poultry, but free-grazing is still common,

Within the Tay village, neighbors and kinship relations coexist and dominate the life of the national cultural identity, People in the village, mostly relatives, bride-in-law far and near, interrelated with each other,

Like the Nung, Tay people most of them have been granted certificates of land for measuring projects, the remaining types of land will continue to be implemented under other projects. In terms of communication language, most Tay people can hear and speak Mandarin (Vietnamese), so the implementation of the Ethnic Minority Development Plan is quite convenient.

Currently, most of the Tay ethnic people in some districts of the province have been granted certificates under the GCN measurement project under the overall project or projects for land use right certificates. The people's land parcels were basically issued in accordance with the intended use and the owner. However, in the process of issuing land use right certificate, there are many difficulties as usual, ethnic minorities give their children, security, purchase, sale and transfer without paper documents as prescribed. oral or written handwritten without confirmation ... on the other hand, the loss of issued land use right certificate are also common because people still do not see it important to have the land use right certificate. also the land traditions his father left behind for a long time no one can use.

c) Other EM:

In addition to the Nung and Tay EM in Bac Giang province, there are also the San Diu, Hoa, San Chi, Cao Lan ... the cultural identity of these EM is almost similar to that of the Nung and Tay people,

3, Project Impact assessment

3,1, Positive impact:

The project is expected to mainly bring positive impacts to the communities in the project area, including the interests of ethnic minorities, as follows:

- Reducing administrative time and increasing efficiency for land users: The implementation of administrative procedures through the internet will increase the transparency of information in the declaration and implementation of human procedures, It saves time and efficiency in reaching out to government agencies and employees, Based on administrative reforms, travel and paper costs, along with issues of bureaucracy and distractions, will be minimized,

- Improvement of the business environment: With the transparency of land information and the convenient retrieval of information, investors can obtain the information they need to serve their business (e.g, the status and information of the land plot, the requirements and the procedures of the contract without having to visit the plot),

- Improved administrative procedures for public services land users: Based on the sharing of land information between related public services, such as notary offices, law enforcement agencies laws and tax authorities, This represents a significant improvement in the accelerated coordination of public settlements for land users, In particular, the link between the notary offices will avoid the overlap in the notary service as the notary can check whether the parcel is notarized in another location before they carry out notary services, This will also result in a reduction in the cost of the verification process and verification of the records as it is available on the MPLIS system, Households and individuals who can benefit from the linkage between the Notary Public offices can reduce the risks and costs involved, They can check whether their plots are in the project area, or plan for new development or in a dispute, This will minimize the risk of land transactions,

3,2, Negative impact:

The project will focus on improving the legal framework, building and operating MPLIS on the basis of existing land data for better land management and socio-economic development, The project does not propose to build any civil works, so there will be no land acquisition leading to physical and economic displacement or restriction of land use, There will be no impact on the exploitation of natural resources and vice versa, so the negative impact on the implementation of the project is almost none, However, land disputes among some land users may occur when the information related to land users is clear, specific and transparent, This issue will be considered and discussed during consultation with EM community in the stage of project implementation,

2, Activity 2: Communication campaign using modern communication tools

 Communication strategies:

An appropriated communication strategy shall be established and implemented to promote the citizens', especially EM's and vulnerable groups', needs for land information, At the same time, it expresses the stronger commitment of local authorities in solving the constraints in complete land information services delivery, VILG's communication strategies (CS) and project operation manual (POM) shall consider the contents and requirements made by citizens in the local community consultations, and not miss the vulnerable groups and their benefits, Communication strategy shall establish a two-way environment for dialogue, which means it is a channel for project's information transferred to community, and also a channel for listening, responses and feedbacks to the communities' concerns, Given that, a comprehensive communication strategy to support the project shall be designed and implemented, A draft of communication strategy shall deal with following issues:

environment with supports from VILG; the regular involvement of land users shall be guaranteed by consulting for their concerns about the benefits of land use as well as access to land information; reliable delivery of land information in localities, Moreover, local staffs shall strengthen their communicating skills; understanding, facilitating, and making forums for communities to response during the VILG project implementation,

- ✓ Ways to build the bases for the community participation in discussions and dialogues with land managers on different topics including their concerns and the need for an understanding of their land use rights as well as land information to be acquired from the project's information system;
- ✓ Ways to build communication bases at various levels (reporting sessions for citizens, hamlet meetings, etc,) to be able to receive feedbacks on the activities of services delivery parties and their ability in solving the increasing demands on the land information services, which is also a VILG's result, Procedures for the feedback mechanism shall be clear and transparent with special focus on the vulnerable group, E,g, Issues associated to information receiving channel and stakeholders shall be responsible for handling the feedbacks within an anticipated amount of time, Prompt guidance and satisfaction of land users' concerns and suggestions shall be achieved by communication strategies and monitoring processes,

- The users:

- ✓ How to strengthen the needs and maintain the use of land information services, especially in the vulnerable group,
- ✓ How to make changes in communicating behaviors, especially in different EM groups in the project area, Communication strategies and documents shall be designed in the way that accounted for differences in behavior cultures among various EM groups and made appropriate changes to fit with these behaviors,
- ✓ How to adjust the activities in local disseminating sessions in land information in the communication campaigns to solve specific needs of various EM groups in terms of languages and cultures, Strategy shall be considered with differences in information sharing among various EM group, and taking advantage of reliable communication structures and mechanisms, and both EM's official and unofficial organizations to disseminate the project information, and allowing supports and consultation with EM's people in land use using relevant languages and in culturally appropriated ways, Local personels are encouraged to proactively support the inaccessible group,
