1. Introduction

After nine months since this global monitoring platform was launched, social assistance, insurance and active labor market programs in response to Covid-19 continue to rise. As of December 11, a total of 215 countries or territories have planned or implemented 1,414 social protection measures (figure 1). Such level represents a 20% increase since the latest update on September 18.

Social assistance still accounts for most, or 62%, of global responses, with cash transfers emerging as the most widely used form of social assistance recorded in our database (figure 2).

The composition of social protection varies by country income groups and regions (figure 3). Social assistance represents nearly 90% of measures in low income countries, while its less than half in high income settings; conversely, the presence of social insurance is clearly aligned with income, i.e., ranging from 8% in low- to 31% in high-income countries. Similarly, active labor market programs vary between 3 and 21% across the income spectrum. While responses in Sub-Saharan Africa mostly revolve around social assistance or safety nets (86%), these claim large shares also in South Asia (75%) and Latin America and the Caribbean (70%). Europe and Central Asia is the region with the largest share of active labor market programs (20%), while North America leads on social insurance (38%).

Breaking down the broad components, since September there are 146 new social assistance measures. Cash transfers now include 429 programs in 166 countries, a program growth of 26% over the past 3 months (table 1). Separately classified are 29 social pension schemes in 27 countries, as well as 22 cash-for-work programs in 18 countries. If all of these are conflated as a single category, cash-based transfers would represent 34% of global responses. In-kind food assistance also plays a major role with 177 programs and 30 school feeding schemes in 110 and 27 countries, respectively. Exemptions, deferrals and waivers for utility payments and financial obligations (e.g., rents) are also popular measures, including 183 programs in 112 countries.

Table 1. Social assistance programs

Moving to social insurance, our database includes an additional 60 measures since September, now reaching the sizable number of 346 schemes in 136 countries (table 2). Most of those interventions take the form of unemployment benefits (103 schemes), followed by paid sick leave (85) and the subsidization of social security contributions (77). Pensions and support for healthcare insurance also feature prominently with 57 and 24 measures, respectively.

Active labor market programs have also grown remarkably over the past 3 months, including moving from 169 schemes in September to currently 198 schemes in 107 countries (table 3). Wage subsidies are now featuring in 122 cases across 93 countries. Other measures like 29 trainings, 34 episodes of adjustments to labor market regulations, and 13 cases of reduced work time complement the package of global labor market responses.

Going back to the most widely adopted measures, or cash transfer programs, their duration continues to be short-term, including being provided for an average of 3.3 months. Out of the 429 cash programs recorded, only 32 were extended for an additional period of time (i.e., for 2.8 months on average) (figure 4).

Social protection programs have been adapted in different ways (table 4). In terms of benefit increases, or vertical expansions, a total of 42 existing cash transfer schemes in 33 countries have augmented the generosity of existing programs. Those statistics grow to 52 and 39, respectively, in the case of social assistance overall. At the same time, 26 countries have provided additional payments to beneficiaries in 37 preexisting programs. In terms of horizontal expansion, 12 programs in 10 countries scaled up their existing cash transfers (and 28 schemes in 21 countries in the case of social assistance in general). The number of new programs has been significant, namely 272 schemes in 133 countries. In other words, 63% of cash transfer responses to Covid-19 rely on schemes introduced in the pandemic. New schemes include 124 one-off targeted payments, 6 one-off universal transfers, one universal transfer with multiple payments, and 141 targeted programs providing multiple payments. Importantly, 25 countries have expanded 35 cash transfers both horizontally and vertically; 31 schemes in 24 countries have done neither, but still benefitted from administrative simplifications or advancements of payments due in later periods.

Considering all social assistance, horizontal coverage would include a planned level of 1.82 billion people. Out of these, the estimated actual beneficiaries, or those effectively reached as of December 11, are 1.28 billion people or 16% of the world's population. If we only consider cash transfers, these reached a planned level of 1.55 billion people, 1.1 of which are actually reached (or 14% of the global population).

Which countries show highest coverage? Figure 5 sets out the top-10 countries by coverage rates (% of population) and numbers (million people). With regards to the former, top 6 countries include those that opted for a universal cash transfer (the seventh, Guyana, is planned), followed by large-scale programs in the Philippines, Dominican Republic, United States and Pakistan. In terms of million people, the United States one-off transfer of $1,200 benefited 159 million people, followed by Japan's universal program (117 million) and Pakistan's Ehsaas scheme (95 million). Brazil, China, Korea, Indonesia, Myanmar and Russia also present significant coverage, including between 68 and 23 million people.

How large or generous are the transfers provided? On average, cash transfers represent 32% of monthly GDP per capita, a level that varies between 26% in upper middle-income countries to 86% in low income settings. For 23 countries it was possible to estimate the relative increase in transfer generosity relative to pre-Covid levels¹. Results show that on average, cash transfer benefits nearly doubled or soared by 95%. Such increases range from 400% in Mongolia to 18% in Moldova (figure 6).

¹ Methodological steps were the following: (i) pre-Covid transfers data was provided by the ASPIRE database (benefits presented in daily average transfers in 2011 PPP); (ii) post-Covid transfers data from our database for social protection responses (with benefits presented in monthly local currency); (iii) deflate post-Covid benefits from 2020 to 2011* and then convert it to PPP using WDI PPP conversion factor, private consumption; and (iv) we divided the converted post covid benefits by 30 to get the daily benefits. Notes: * Using the following equation for Income in PPP: $[(\text{nominal income} \times \text{base year CPI}) / \text{nominal CPI}] / (\text{PPP conversion factor or ICP})$. Here the base year is 2011 and nominal is 2020, but we used 2019 because CPI in the WDI data were not available for 2020.  For one-off measures, we assumed the benefits for 6 months so instead of dividing by 30 days we divided by 180 days. The choice was made because assuming a one and three months transfer would result in an enormous and likely unrealistic change.

Based on pre-Covid household survey data, it was possible to also undertake an analysis of coverage increase since the pandemic. Excluding 13 cases with four-digit coverage rate increases (i.e., due to countries' very low coverage levels to start with), the average increase in coverage was about 240% (figure 7).

How are programs progressing in implementation? We have identified 353 social assistance programs for which data on implementation status is provided. Out of such sample, 206 programs are ongoing, while 134 were concluded and 13 are planned (table 5).

Table 5. Planned, ongoing and ended social assistance programs

Programs	Planned	Ongoing	Ended	Total
Cash transfers (conditional and unconditional)	9	136	106	251

For cash transfers, information is available at more granular program level for the majority of schemes. Out of the 136 ongoing programs, figure 8 lays out progress in coverage (or “actual” values) against planned coverage levels for 82 programs. In general, implementation progress is encouraging, with an average difference between actual and planned values of only 2.3 percentage points.

Figure 8. Planned versus actual coverage (horizontal expansion) of cash transfer programs

A similar verification in implementation progress was possible for the vertical expansion among 23 programs. Figure 9 shows the extent to which people in existing programs received larger transfers. With the exception of Trinidad and Tobago’s food assistance scheme, implementation has been impressive with actual and planned values closely matching throughout the sample.

Figure 9. Planned versus actual coverage among beneficiaries receiving higher transfers (vertical expansion) of cash transfer programs

What can explain such positive implementation performance across vertical and horizontal scale up? As discussed in multiple past editions of this global paper, there is a range of delivery practices that are enhancing implementation. Among these, it appears that countries with pre-existing delivery capabilities are better able to scale-up. While intuitive, figures 10-12 help illustrate such assumptions: based on 24 countries with available data for both registries and Covid-related cash coverage, the reach of preexisting social registries is correlated with coverage increases in cash transfers (figure 10). A similar relationship emerges for vertical expansion (benefit size) for a subsample of countries, although the correlation is more modest. Finally, figure 12 plots horizontal scale up of cash transfers against the JAM index (a composite indicator combining ID, mobile phones and bank account data), although in this case the correlation is weaker with the exception of regions like LAC.

How much are countries spending on social protection Covid-19 responses? Based on data from 126 countries, a total of $800.6 billion has been hitherto invested in such response. Such volume represents about 6.3% of the estimated $12.6 trillion in global stimulus packages. In comparative terms, spending on social protection is 22.6% higher than the $653 billion investment occurred over the great recession in 2008–09 (figure 13).

Clearly, spending across regions and country income groups varies significantly (table 6). For instance, social assistance spending ranges from $1.7 billion in low-income countries to $515.3 billion in high income settings, and from $6.1 billion in Africa to $290 in North America. Among the 17 low income countries for which data was available, no particular spending is registered for social insurance and active labor market programs. Those difference across contexts are also reflected on per-capita spending, which varies from $6 in low income countries to $525 in high income ones.

How are countries financing current scale up efforts?² Based on information available for 31 countries and 70 data points, we divided sources into domestic and international, each including a select number of sub-categories (table 7). The most prevalent domestic modality was restructuring or re-prioritizing budget lines in 15 countries; 14 countries incurred in domestic debt and deficit spending; while 7 tapped state reserves, contingent funds and fiscal savings. These strategies were not mutually exclusive and 48% of countries pursued mixed-source financing. In general, 32% of countries tapped domestic sources as the only source of financing and 19% relied on external resources only.

² This discussion draws from Almenfi, M., Breton, M., Dale, P., Gentilini, U., Pick, A., and Richardson, D. (2020) “Where is the money coming from? The level of domestic financing varies remarkably across the country income spectrum. Those shares increase from nearly zero in LICs, to 37% in LMICs, and to 47% in UMICs (and 100% in HICs). However, in some cases, the injection of external financing has been limited and most spending would come from domestic sources. For example, Pakistan spent approximately $872 million on its emergency response. Out of this, $109 million went on additional support for the 4.5 million regular safety net beneficiaries and $763 million to 10.5 million new beneficiaries via the Ehsaas program. Within such response, support from the World Bank represented only 3% of total government spending on the emergency response. Similarly, the Indian government's first package of social protection assistance was about $23 billion, with nearly $1 billion supported by the World Bank.

There are several innovations in lower income settings. In Mauritania, a special fund for social solidarity was created with a state contribution of $170 million. This helped support 206,000 households with a cash transfer of $60/person. Now there is a possible extension of the fund for an additional $13.5 million. In Uzbekistan, $44.8 million was generated through public-private partnerships, including donations and charity from individuals and businesses being directed to the "Kindness and Support" program of the Ministry of Family Support.

In high-income contexts, there are different ways financing universal cash transfers. In Singapore, a one-off cash transfer of $1.1 billion was financed from reserves and contingent budgets; Hong Kong spent $9.16 billion for cash payouts, all via deficit spending; in Serbia, the universal cash benefit cost $712 million, which was part of the 3.9 billion stimulus package. Half of that was financed by a Eurobond valued at €2 billion, re-prioritized existing budget, and currency reserves.

Social protection spending can come at the expense of other social services. In Ukraine, part of the process included cuts in subsidies, regional budgets, social services, the planned census, among others. In order to meet higher expenditures, the project budget deficit was increased to 7.5% of GDP. Most ministries experienced a reduction of respective budgets, except a few like Ministry of Health, Finance, Social Policy, and Internal Affairs.

Tapping reserves and re-prioritizing spending is a frequently adopted strategy. South Africa announced an emergency spending package of $30 billion, about 29% of which was financed through reprioritization and drawing from the Unemployment Insurance Fund's surplus. In Indonesia and the Philippines, the response reallocated funds from nonurgent goods expenditures and those not yet programmed. Singapore, as mentioned, is an example of utilizing reserves: it drew SP$900 million from past reserves to fund its $1.1 billion Solidarity Payment response (universal one-off cash transfer). Uzbekistan tapped on $324 million from their sovereign wealth fund (the Fund for the Reconstruction and Development of Uzbekistan) and restructured their budget, such as postponing the non-priority projects and expenditures to post-crisis period, to finance Covid-19 respons

- ALS, the employment service, has so far paid out DKK 52 million in stimulus payments as part of the government's job retention scheme. The scheme supports companies hit by the corona crisis by temporarily helping to pay the wages of people who cannot do their jobs, thus allowing employees to stay on the payroll despite not working due to the lockdown. More than 4,000 people have signed up to the scheme. However, with the gradual lifting of the lockdown, many have now returned to work, leaving the current number of people registered in the scheme at 3,575. Update: The job retention scheme, which was due to expire on 31 August, will be extended until 31 October and will also include people registered as being in quarantine ²⁸⁹ ²⁹⁰

The main eligibility requirements include that businesses must be registered with the Inland Revenue Division (IRD) and the NIS; have been in operation prior to March 2020 and is only applicable for workers who were on the payroll in February 2020 or before; among others. Businesses had to apply each month for up to four months, from April to July 2020. Grants were disbursed to businesses on a monthly basis. To increase the likelihood of workers and jobs retention, employee verification forms were required with the applications, starting with the second monthly application. Management and high-level jobs were excluded from this intervention. The payroll support program benefited at least 140 businesses and 3,100 workers. The GoG has approved a temporary income support program for the self-employed workers in the tourism-related sector (including transportation) such as taxi and bus drivers, tourist vendors, and tour guides, among others. The benefit amount of this program ranges from EC$300 to EC$800 per month for three months, requested through a one-time application, reducing administrative cost for both

The benefit amount was determined by the Ministry of Finance based on previous income records of workers in specific occupations to partially compensate the loss of income. 	Cash transfers (conditional and unconditional)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The Decreto di Rilancio - “Relaunch decree” - a stimulus package of €55B signed on May 19, 2020– suspends all conditionalities related to the Guaranteed Minimum Income program, or Reddito di Cittadinanza (RdC), for two additional months, until July 2020, with the exception of accepting an adequate job offer in the municipality of residence. The rationale is the minimization of movement of beneficiaries to social services or to public employment services, where they are expected to sign a social inclusion pact or a labor pact. A separate note stressed the importance of ensuring continuity of social services during the emergency, with a focus on protecting social workers and beneficiaries from contagion, promoting the use of telephone and technology to maintain contact with families, and paying special attention to situation of vulnerability for women and minors. Existing resources aimed at strengthening services for RdC can be reoriented towards activities most needed in response to the pandemic. The Relaunch decree announced a temporary means tested cash transfer, Reddito di Emergenza, Emergency Income, for those vulnerable households not protected by any other social assistance measure. The benefit lasts for two months and the amount varies between €400 to €800 per month, depending on the equivalence scale. Applications are open till the end of June and payments will be disbursed during the months of July and August. The total available

Workers who carried out their job remotely are not entitled to the bonus. The Relaunch Decree extends the one-off €600 (US$ 660) bonus to self-employed and professional workers, including agricultural, tourism, cultural sector workers by one additional month for April 2020. In May the bonus increases to €1,000 for those self-professional workers who can demonstrate a 30% reduction in income during March-April with respect to the same period of last year. 1000 euros compensation for seasonal workers, workers in the sports and entertainment sector⁴⁰² indemnity provided for seasonal workers in tourism, entertainment workers, door-to-door salesmen⁴⁰³

The value of the wage subsidy is tied to the number of workers in the company. Firms with more than 76 employees must demonstrate that their revenues have fallen by at least half since January 2020. Employers will be disallowed from laying off these workers and from reducing workers' existing wages. The subsidy is only available to companies registered prior to 2020 and limited to Malaysian employees. This is expected to benefit 4.8 million workers. The government has since announced an extension of the program in the Penjana plan and subsequently on September 23, 2020 (Wage Subsidy Program 2.0). The extended program is intended for companies that are still facing reductions in revenue of at least 30 percent compared to the previous year and is capped at RM600 monthly for each employee up to a maximum of 200 employees. An additional RM2.4 billion has been allocated to the Wage Subsidy Program 2.0 to benefit 1.3 million workers. Workers providing contract services to the Government (e.g. cleaning and food supply to public institutions) will receive a wage replacement. This will benefit 80,000 workers costing RM110 million (US$27 million). The Government will also extend these service contracts for one month reflecting the duration of the Movement Control Order which has restricted the movement of all individuals and workers outside of essential services.

The Baxnano program (which costs $65 million) is intended to provide cash transfers to targeted poor and vulnerable households and establish the key building blocks of a national shock-responsive safety net system. The program is anticipated to target 270,000 poor and vulnerable households (approximately 1.2 million individuals or 9.6 percent of the population) across the Federal Member States of Somalia and provide them with nutrition-linked cash transfer. The families will be able to use the money for their immediate needs, such as food and basic services. This programme will be executed in areas of fragility due to widespread poverty, acute drought and long-drawn-out conflicts and insecurity⁶⁵⁷ The government is planning on providing nutrition-linked cash transfers and compensation for those engaged in livestock markets⁶⁵⁸

The focus will be on those with lower income professions, including the tourism sector. The campaign will be funded through the National Fund for Social Aid (NSAF) in addition to the contributions from individuals, businesses and civil society through a campaign account [1]. On 16 April, the distribution of the one-time unemployment allowance (SYP 100,000) started. As of April 29, 305,695 people registered in the Government's online assistance database, including 248,530 unemployed persons, 32,709 people over 70 and 24,456 people with disabilities. The Ministry confirmed that the data for unemployed workers are verified with the Ministry of Tourism and the Craftsmen Union, while matching the data for the rest of the workers at the governorate level in coordination with neighbourhood committees. Workers of the following sectors will be prioritised: daily and seasonal workers in the fields of transportation, handicrafts, porters, tourist guides, and

For the hours not worked, the government and the employer would each pay a third of the wages, while the employee would forgo a third. However, due to the new restriction, the country is revamping the scheme. The employer’s contribution to the employee’s wages when not working will be only 5 per cent. The state will pay 62 per cent of the hours not worked, and the employee will still forgo about a third. In further changes, employees will be eligible for the job support scheme if they are working at least 20 per cent of their normal hours.⁷⁵⁶ The measured extended furlough scheme to March 2021⁷⁵⁷

During this payment cycle, humanitarian support was provided for a onetime top-up to the beneficiary amount to help beneficiaries cope with the COVID-19 global pandemic. The top-up amount was approximately 45 per cent of the beneficiaries' quarterly base amount. As of 22 July, 1.418 million beneficiaries received their benefits with this top-up, which correspond to about 89 per cent of all cash recipients. Different COVID-19 preventative measures, identified through a thorough risk mitigation exercise, are in place to ensure the safety of beneficiaries and project personnel. Beneficiaries were requested to cover their nose and mouth, to maintain physical distancing while queuing and inside the payment sites and to use the provided hand sanitiser before entering and after collecting their cash. All project staff are using protective gear (masks and gloves) and a strong scheduling and crowd management mechanisms were put in place to prevent crowding at the payment sites.⁸²³
