Introduction

The information for this SPAAR Directory of Agricultural Research Institutions in Africa was compiled from various sources. The objective of this directory is to provide those with an interest in African agricultural research institutions with an easily accessible source of information on national, regional and international agricultural research institutions in Africa.

The directory is arranged on a sub-regional basis (Eastern, Southern, and Western and Central Africa), starting with international and regional institutions (with inter-governmental institutions marked by an asterisk) and followed by national institutions. The names of contacts in each institution are given along with a brief description of the institution's mandate. Alphabetical indexes of staff member and institution names are included for easy reference. Also included is a list of the names of SPAAR donor members.

In view of frequent staff changes, SPAAR will be grateful for any corrections and/or additions to this directory to make it as complete and up-to-date as possible. An update form at the back of this directory is included for this purpose. The directory will be updated regularly with anticipated distribution at or before each Plenary Session.

Special Program for African Agricultural Research

Most Sub-Saharan Africa (SSA) countries are highly dependent on agriculture for income and employment generation, food security and economic growth. The Special Program for African Agricultural Research (SPAAR) was established in 1985 when donors were concerned about the inadequacy of technology transfer to and from national agricultural research systems (NARSs). SPAAR was convened as an informal mechanism to improve donor consultation and collaboration with the objective of stimulating and sustaining indigenous agricultural research capacity.

During its Tenth Plenary in May 1990, SPAAR donors adopted a more proactive agenda based on regional Frameworks for Action (FFA). The FFAs, which are currently at the core of SPAAR's program and mandate, provide the scope, orientation and guidelines to strengthen National Agricultural Research Systems within a regional context. The FFAs seek to revitalize agricultural research through: institutionalizing a strategic planning process that is participatory and responsive; developing sustainable funding mechanisms; improving institutional management and creating transparency and accountability; building country coalition and support groups that involve all the stakeholders; strengthening researcher, extension, farmer, and market linkages; and promoting regional and international collaboration to ensure cost effectiveness and spillover effects.

In 1990 SPAAR members agreed to support existing regional research organizations in Southern Africa, the Southern Africa Centre for Cooperation in Research and Training (SACCAR), and in the Sahel, the Institut du Sahel (INSAH), and to prepare a research strategy for the SSA sub-regions that did not yet have regional research organizations. Tanzania and Mali were selected as the pilot countries to implement the FFA principles in Southern Africa and the Sahel. By 1995 four regional FFAs had been developed: for Southern Africa, the Sahel, Eastern and Central Africa, and the Humid and Sub-Humid zones of West and Central Africa. A new regional collaborative mechanism was created: the Association for Strengthening Agricultural Research in Eastern and Central Africa (ASARECA). In West and Central Africa the FFA process led to the transformation of the Conference des Responsables de Recherche Agronomique Africains (CORAF) into a full-fledged regional coordinating body. NARS leaders in the region also decided to merge the FFA of the Sahel and the Humid and Sub Humid zones.

Membership in SPAAR is open to all organizations that are involved in or provide significant direct support to African agricultural research systems in the public and private sectors and that are prepared to exchange information and collaborate to improve the effectiveness of this assistance. Currently, twenty-three donor organizations are represented in SPAAR, comprising bilateral donors and international, regional and autonomous agencies. In 1994, the donors decided to open SPAAR membership to all NARSs in SSA. Most Plenaries will, in future, be held in a SSA country.
